

Episode 257: Will Data Breach Litigation Soar After Latest Class Actions?

Date : October 9, 2019

In this week's TechLaw10 podcast Jonathan and Eric debate the likelihood of class actions coming into the UK.

They discuss 3 recent UK cases - Google which involved the misuse of data in the so-called 'Safari Workaround' and two data breach cases involving Morrisons and British Airways (BA).

They consider the likelihood of civil actions or 'Group Litigation Orders' in the UK in addition to regulatory fines.
